President Woodrow Wilson has devoted the best years of his life to the preparation of his great work, "A History of the American People," from the earliest times to the accession of President Theodore Roosevelt. The work, which is just completed, is monumental in character and scope, represents the genius of the greatest historical thinker of modern times, and is written in that delightfully flowing style which makes it read like a romance. It is printed from new type specially cast in 1902. In the matter of illustration, every field of human activity has been searched, and hundreds upon hundreds of new portraits, prints, maps, plans, and pictures make the pictorial features alone tell their wonderful story of the finding of the continent and the birth and growth of what is the United States of America. There is a photogravure frontispiece to each volume, and portraits in India tint and black. It is a curious fact that there is not a single comple narrative history of the United States in existence to-day. Dr. Woodrow Winslow's is the first. In 5 vols., 8vo Library binding, uncut edges, gilt tops (in a box), per set, $17.50 net; Three-quarter calf or three-quarter levant (in a box), per set, $30.00 net.

NOTES IN SEASON.

A. C. McCLURG & Co. publish to-day "Prince Silverwings, and Other Fairy Tales," by Edith Ogden Harrison, the wife of Carter H. Harrison the well-known Mayor of Chicago. This is Mrs. Harrison's first literary venture, and it is likely to attract considerable attention both on account of the unquestioned merits of the book and the prominence of the author. Mrs. Lucy Fitch Perkins has made some charming drawings for the book which are reproduced in colors.

LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY will publish next week "The Whirlwind," by Rupert Hughes. It is a study of the life history of a salient character, beginning with his boyhood in the country before the war, and carrying him through a brilliant war record, and a subsequent equally brilliant political career, up to his candidacy for the Presidency. The delineation of the country, and the picture of the dramatic episodes of the Civil War, are ably done, and a striking love story runs through the book. The title is a fitting description of the ups and downs. yet irresistible progress of the hero's life.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just brought out "The Book of Joyous Children," by James Whitcomb Riley, which contains some of the author's best work, with illustrations by Will Vawter, made under Mr. Riley's supervision; "Out of Gloucester," a book full of adventure and character, by James B. Connolly, with illustrations by M. J. Burns and Frank Brangwyn; "Whom the Gods Destroyed," by Josephine Dodge Daskam, a group of dramatic stories of the artistic temperament, illustrating in every case some one of the almost inevitable tragedies that attend this temperament; "Ralegh in Guiana," by Professor Barrett Wendell, three essays in dramatic verse made in the Elizabethan manner; also, "Henry VIII.," a sumptuous historical work, by A. F. Pollard, limited to 1400 copies, of which 250 are on Japanese paper. Henry Van Dyke's new book, "The Blue Flower," stories of search for happiness, will be ready October 25. Like the author's immensely popular book of last year, "Ruling Passion," the stories have a real holiday flavor, and will be attractively printed and illustrated with colored full-page drawings.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will publish on the 15th inst. "Our Lady of the Beeches," by the Baroness von Hutten, the story of the romantic attachment of a famous scientist and a clever American, the wife of an Austrian nobleman, that is said to be handled with much skill, humor and delicacy; "The Diary of a Saint," a story of self-sacrifice, by Arlo Bates; "The Heritage," by Barton E. Stevenson, author of "A Soldier of Virginia," the scene of which is laid in Ohio toward the end of the Revolution, the author taking part in St. Clair's ill-starred expedition against the Indians; "Jesus' Way," by William De Witt Hyde, president of Bowdoin College, who dwells on what Christianity was, as Jesus taught it to his disciples, when it was known simply as "the way;" "American Navigation," a historical survey of its rise and development, a study of its decline and a presentation of remedies, by William W. Bates; also, "Masterpieces of Greek Literature," edited by Professor J. H. Wright, of Harvard, uniform with the "Masterpieces of American and British Literature."

A plea for the farm animals of the sea-coast towns of Maine, which are too remote to be reached by the humane societies. The suffering of the animals in the long, cold Maine winters is very great. Interwoven with the lessons of tenderness to dumb animals, is a story of the fortunes of a doll household.

Wood, F: Government and the state: a consideration of elementary principles and their practical application. N. Y., Putnam, 1902. [S.] c. 5+310 p. O. cl., $2.

In that aggregation of human beings termed a state, the need is readily perceived of a power that shall adjust the various relations which must exist among persons composing that body. That power is termed "Government." In order that government shall act for the best interests of the people, an understanding of the character of the people of a state is imperative. The moral and physical characteristics of a people thus become an important preliminary study in political science. This treatise will help to awaken an interest in political science, and will spread a knowledge of its principles.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

OCTOBER 11, 1902.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

STORE COMFORTS.

IT is remarkable how often storekeepers who spare neither pains nor money in furnishing their store, are apt to overlook, if they do not wilfully neglect, certain details that would contribute to the comfort of their customers as much as they would prove of direct benefit to themselves—in saving stock as well as in encouraging trade.

Take for example, the matter of caring for the wet umbrellas brought into the store on rainy days. How many booksellers think of providing a checking stand at or near the door for the care of the customers' umbrellas. And yet, apart from the fact that such a service would be a great convenience to the customer, and put him in a position to look about him more leisurely, and so be tempted to make larger purchases, it would also in many cases benefit the storekeeper, as many dollars' worth of books might easily be damaged—and, as a matter of fact, are frequently damaged—in a single day by the moisture or the drippings from carelessly handled umbrellas. Let the attendant be ever so watchful he will not always be able to prevent a thoughtless or careless customer from laying his or her umbrella across a row of books or lean it against the shelves, thereby ruining the backs and edges of sometimes as many as a dozen books at once.

Every store, especially those that encourage the patronage of women, should make it a point to offer this service, even relieving the customers of their mackintoshes and parcels on rainy days. The service should be given as a matter of course, promptly, and should cause as little delay as possible to the outgoing as well as incoming customer. The first cost of initiating such a system might seem to the timid shopkeeper enormous and out of all proportion to the benefit received; but, compared with the possible saving in stock, its assurance of comfort to the customer and incentive to tarrying in the store, as well as its advertisement of good storekeeping, its cost would sink into insignificance in the estimation of a wide-awake merchant.

Then, there is the matter of a well-appointed retiring and toilet room or a neat little parlor, with a few of the fashion and other papers scattered about and writing materials conveniently placed. How many think they can afford such a luxury in a section of the store that could easily be spared for such a convenience. The 3 x 9 foot railed-off space in some half-lighted obscure part of the store, or, worse still, in the draught near the front door, with a few stiff-backed hard-seated chairs, and a table littered with well-thumbed and soiled last year's books is not the alternative we have in mind. If a suitable enclosed room cannot be provided then let a well-lighted space, somewhere near the centre of the store, be set apart for the purpose, furnished with comfortable easy chairs and settees, within reach of the very latest books. Speaking of chairs reminds us that bookstores as a rule are without them. One might as well furnish a library in the most luxurious fashion and leave out chairs and tables. Imagine a shoestore without chairs!

It is the absence of these small comforts that in a measure makes visits at the bookstore so brief. Customers come in, ask for a book, have it handed out and wrapped up and away they go. If there were in evidence an invitation to loaf about the store, at one's ease, isn't it likely that the visitor would be able to see more books for himself or to hear them talked about by the attendants or by chance acquaintances and so be tempted to make other purchases besides those for which the store was purposely visited?

OXFORD, on the 8th inst., observed a notable anniversary—the three hundredth year of the opening of the Bodleian Library, the first public library in England, if not in Europe. The real event is anticipated, because it was not until November 8, 1602, that the present foundation was thrown open to the public by the munificence of Sir Thomas Bodley, once lecturer in Greek and public orator. At his own expense he refitted the bare walls of the library of Humfrey, Duke of Gloucester, founded about 1450, but allowed to be completely broken up and dispersed. Sir Thomas spent a fortune upon his library. He also had the foresight to bargain with the Company of Stationers, in exchange for a gift of plate worth £50, that a copy of every book entered at Stationers' Hall should go to the library. In time it came about that registry at Stationers' Hall was required to secure copyright, so that Oxford, as well as the British Museum, and the public libraries at Cambridge, Edinburgh and Dublin get a free copy of every book published in Great Britain. The Bodleian Library contains 600,000 bound volumes, among which are 30,000 volumes of manuscripts and literary treasures. Publishers and librarians from all parts of the world met at Oxford to do honor to the venerable institution whose guardians since its very infancy have always been ready to give assistance to the scholars and students throughout the world by unlocking freely the treasures in its care.

PROTECTION AGAINST INSECTS IN BOOKS.

At the Congress of French Librarians, held in August, 1900, a prize of $200 was offered to the author of the best essay on the preservation of books from the attacks of insects, and the destruction of the latter. At the same time M. Pellechet, hon. keeper of the Department of Printed Books in the National Library at Paris, offered two further prizes of $100 and $200, respectively, for other papers on the same subject.

Twenty-three essays were received, and the awards in respect of them have just been announced. The congress prize of $200 goes to Johann Bolle, an agricultural chemist, of Gontz, Austria, who has made an exhaustive study of the various kinds of insects inimical to books and bookbindings. Among other means of getting rid of these pests he recommends the employment of sulphuret of carbon; but as this is of a very inflammable nature, Bolle has devised a neat little apparatus by the aid of which the sulphuret may be used without danger. He made numerous experiments with a view to finding out whether or not the use of sulphuret would tend to discolor the bindings, but found that that was not at all likely to be the case. The Pellechet prize of $100 (the other has not been awarded) will be given to Constant-Houlbert, a professor at the Lycee of Rennes. In his paper he has described and illustrated about fifty species of insects, in the various stages of development. Like Bolle, he recommends fumigating the books with sulphuret of carbon, first placing them in a hermetically sealed box. He considers this method superior to treating with superheated air, which has a tendency to warp the covers. Houlbert also disapproves of the employment of gaseous chlorine or the vapor of formaldehyde, the latter having, in his opinion, no stronger effect than ordinary water vapor.

The two monographs, which practically form a manual of insecticides, so far as the particular varieties which affect books are concerned, will no doubt be published in due course.

BOOKSELLING IN RUSSIA.

The Russian newspaper, Sieverny Kraï, publishes a study by M. Chérénine, a provincial bookseller, on the present condition of bookselling in Russia. He finds that the number of sellers of books and popular works in all the countries of the empire does not exceed the figure of 2,000, of whom 327 are in the two capitals, the others carrying on their trade in 460 towns and hamlets. Bookselling in Russia, and especially in the provinces, is in a lamentable state. There are not more than thirty houses doing a trade of any extent, where serious works and general literature are obtainable. The majority of the booksellers sell books only as a second string to the bow, occupying themselves chiefly with grocery, drapery, etc. Practically they sell books only during the two months following the return of the classes from the country, when the classics are asked for. The rest of the year they sell almanacs and books or brochures at a halfpenny or a penny each for the people, this class of literature rarely rising to the price of a dime. As to the great bookselling establishments having connections in all the countries, there are not more than five or six of them. M. Chérénine says the Russian public have not yet reached the level of intellectual development, when the necessity of having a library at home makes itself felt. The public are satisfied with a subscription to a circulating library, or with such books as they can borrow gratis.

OBITUARY NOTES.

James W. Bouton, the well-known New York bookseller and importer, died on the morning of the 6th inst., after a month's illness. He was born at Greenwich, Conn., 1832-1833, and began his business career at the age of thirteen in the employ of D. Appleton & Co., where he remained until he was twenty-one, when he left them to enter the employ of Wiley & Putnam. In 1857 he started in business on his own account as a dealer in second-hand books at No. 87 Walker Street, on the day of the beginning of the great panic of that year. He carried on business there with success, and in 1862 removed to No. 481 Broadway, next door to Brougham's Theatre, afterwards Wallack's. In 1867 he went to No. 416 Broome Street, and in 1870 to No. 706 Broadway. He remained there twenty-one years, establishing in 1888 an uptown store at No. 1152 Broadway. A few years later he started a store in West Twenty-eighth Street, and in 1891 removed his whole business to it. Though Mr. Bouton's name occurs on the title-page of a number of books, he never did any publishing on his own account, but simply acted as the publishing agent of the author, or as the American agent of an English publishing house. As a dealer in rare books he was well known throughout this country and abroad. He was active in a day when opportunities of obtaining rare books easily were more frequent than now, and he had the instinct, if not the knowledge, of holding on to his treasures until the demand for them became active and appreciative.

The Rev. George Rawlinson, Canon of Canterbury, died at the Rectory of All Hallows Church, Lombard Street, London, October 6. Canon Rawlinson was born at Cadlington, November 23, 1815. He was graduated from Oxford where he was tutor for a number of years. In 1872 he was appointed Canon of Canterbury, and in 1888 he was made rector of All Hallows Church, both of which positions he held at the time of his death. Canon Rawlinson was one of the best-known of nineteenth century writers on ancient history, his work dealing more especially with the history of Egypt and the other early Eastern empires. He wrote also on Biblical history and criticism, and in collaboration with his brother, Sir Henry Rawlinson and Sir G. Wilkinson, made a translation of Herodotus. His researches were careful and minute, and, although his works were criticised as lacking animation of style, they were welcomed as additions to the sum of historical knowledge. His best-known historical writings are "The Five Great Monarchies of the Ancient Eastern World," "The Sixth and Seventh Great Monarchies," "A History of Ancient Egypt," "A History of Phoenicia," "The Origin of Nations," and "Historical Illustrations of the Old Testament."

We should have noted before this the death of Martin W. Jones, at his home in New York, August 26. Early this year his health failed, and in July he contemplated settling in Colorado to regain his health. But the disease that had attacked his body—hasty consumption—laid him low before he could get away. Mr. Jones was born in Rutherford, N. J., February 5, 1862, but spent most of his life in Bloomfield. He entered business in 1879 with his father, who was a paper box manufacturer. In 1890, or thereabouts, he entered into business for himself, dealing in subscription books and jobbing odd lots. He first established himself at 6 Clinton Place. Later he removed to 23 Clinton Place, and then to No. 18 East Seventeenth Street, where he dealt chiefly in old books. In 1896 he became travelling salesman for Thomas Nelson & Sons, covering the western trip. Mr. Jones was highly esteemed in the trade and by his brother travellers. His pleasant calls will be missed by a large circle of friends.

John Kensit, the notorious English anti-ritualistic crusader, who was attacked by a mob near Liverpool, died October 8. Kensit was a London bookseller.

Not how much money you spend, but how you spend it, determines whether or not you are economical.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

Professor Barrett Wendell, of Harvard University, and author of "A Literary History of America," etc., has been appointed Clark lecturer on English literature at Trinity College, Cambridge, for the current academic year.

E. Earl Christopher, author of "The Invisibles," just issued by the Saalfield Publishing Co., was born near Shellbyville, Tennessee in 1872. He began his literary career as a reporter and general writer for several newspapers. In 1889 he began his business career in the music business and has been established in several cities of the Union. The young author shows talent of an original kind.

Frederick J. Stimson, ("J. S. of Dale,") of Dedham, Mass., has been nominated for Congress by the Democrats of the Twelfth District of Boston. Mr. Stimson, though more widely known as a novelist, has a brilliant record as lawyer, and as a writer of many standard law books, including a "Handbook of the Labor Laws of the United States," quoted as an authority in the courts of the United States. In 1898 Mr. Stimson was counsel for the United States Industrial Commission, and has served several terms in the Massachusetts Legislature and upon commissions. He was admitted to the bar in New York in 1886, and with Simon Sterne and others had much to do with framing municipal laws of that State.

THOMAS NELSON & SONS will publish on the 20th inst. the American Standard Edition of the Revised New Testament, with topical headings prepared by the American Revision Committee. The book is a 32mo, is printed in minion, and bound in various styles to retail at from 55 cents to $2.50.

THE IRWIN PRESS, Pittsburg, Pa., announce the Ormonde Edition of "The History of John Decastro and his brother Bat, commonly called Old Crab," a famous old book, long out of print. It was first published in London in 1815, and in Boston in 1816. The present edition will have an introduction and notes by William S. Walsh, literary editor of the New York Herald.

MARTIN I. J. GRIFFIN, 2009 N. Twelfth Street, Philadelphia, will publish early in December a Centennial Edition of his work on "Commodore John Barry, the Father of the American Navy." This work was first published in 1897, in a limited edition, the last copies selling for $20. The present issue is gotten up to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of Commodore Barry's birth, which occurred September 13 of the present year.

DAVID MCKAY, Philadelphia, has obtained the American rights in a work on "The Automobile, its construction and management," translated from Gerard Lavergne's "Manual Theoretique et Pratique de l'Automobile sur Route." The work has been revised and edited by Paul N. Hasluck, the editor of Work and Building World, who has made many additions and furnished a number of new illustrations, swelling the total to 500.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY has become the publisher of the books of the Rev. Dr. David James Burrell, heretofore published by W. B. Ketcham Co. The retail prices of the following: "For Christ's Crown," "The Wondrous Cross," "The Morning Cometh," "The Spirit of the Age," "The Gospel of Gladness," "God and the People," "The Religion of the Future," "The Golden Passional," and "The Early Church," have been reduced to the uniform price of $1 each.

LEMCKE & BUECHNER, 812 Broadway, New York, have secured the American market for the third edition of Alexander Schmidt's "Shakespeare Lexicon," a comprehensive dictionary of all the English words, phrases and constructions in the works of the poet. The work has been thoroughly revised and greatly enlarged by G. Sarrazin, and embodies the results of the Shakespeare scholarship of recent times. The work in two royal octavo volumes will be brought out immediately.

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY announce this week a novel by Margaret E. Sangster, entitled "Janet Ward." Although Mrs. Sangster needs no introduction to the literary world, it is to be noted that this is her first venture as a novelist. The interest of the story centers in college life, college settlement work and work among the mountain whites of Tennessee, which give variety to the scenes and large scope for the study of characteristics and the portrayal of character.

E. & J. B. YOUNG & Co. have just brought out "Landscapes of the Bible and Their Story," illustrations of places, sites and cities in Egypt and the Holy Land and descriptions of the scenes depicted, with an introduction by Dr. H. B. Tristram, Canon of Durham; a holiday edition of "The Jackdaw of Rheims," illuminated and illustrated; also, "The Bogey Book," written by E. S., and pictured by R. J. S., a folio of colored pictures, with taking rhymes that will be sure to appeal to young and old.

HERBERT B. TURNER & Co., Boston, have in press a new edition of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Familiar Studies of Men and Books" in two volumes. Each volume will have a photogravure portrait of Stevenson. The title-page of the first volume will bear a vignetted photogravure view of the author's birthplace, and the title-page of the second volume will have a vignetted photogravure view of his home in Samoa. The volumes will be further illustrated with half-tone portraits of the subjects of the studies.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & Co. have just ready "The Poetry of Browning," by Stopford A. Brooke, whose former work on Tennyson gave evidence of his subtle insight into the spirit of the poetry of the nineteenth century. The first chapter of the new volume is devoted to a comparison of Browning and Tennyson, and the author discloses earnest sympathy with both of these poets, so diametrically opposed in character, mind and creative impulse. Needless to say, the Crowells have made a book tempting to add to one's library.

A. S. Barnes & Co. announce "Bayou Triste: a story of Louisiana," by Miss Josephine Hamilton Nicholls, an entertaining story wherein the cordial good feeling existing between the plantation negro and his old master's children and grandchildren is graphically portrayed; also, "Two On Their Travels," by Mrs. Archibald R. Colquhoun, wife of the well-known traveller, an intelligent woman's truthful picture of what she saw in far-off China, Japan, the Philippines and neighboring lands, illustrated with sketches by the author, including eight full-page colored plates.

Robert Grier Cooke, who until recently was President of the Grafton Press, is now publishing under his own name at 70 Fifth Avenue, New York. Mr. Cooke formerly held positions with Harper & Brothers, Collier's Weekly and D. Appleton & Company, and his experience then, and since, in the upbuilding of his own business, has given him a favorable standing in the publishing world. He is now planning the publication of P. Tecumseh Sherman's book entitled "Inside the Machine," and John Albee's "Remembrances of Emerson," which will be brought out during the fall and holiday season.

Funk & Wagnalls Company have just ready a book entitled "The Lost Wedding Ring," by Dr. Cortland Myers, of the Baptist Temple, Brooklyn, N. Y. Dr. Myers approaches his subject from the negative side. He tells what marriage is not, before he discusses it in its positive aspects. The evils that beset the institution command his first attention. "The Lost Wedding Ring" is to him "lost sanctity, security, and salvation." In the latter half of the book, however, the lost is found, and the chapters "The Kingly Husband," "Queen of the Home," and "Strong as Death," present with glowing fervor the Christian ideal of the life-union of man and woman.

Honorary degrees were conferred by Oxford University on the 9th inst. in the presence of an enthusiastic assembly of graduates upon the occasion of the tercentenary of the Bodleian Library. They included that of D. C. L. upon the Hon. Andrew D. White, the American Ambassador to Berlin, and Lord Strathcona, Canadian High Commissioner to Great Britain; doctor of science upon Charles Sedgwick Minot, professor of histology and human embryology at Harvard University; and doctor of letters upon James H. Canfield, librarian of Columbia University; Andrew F. West, professor of Latin at Princeton University, and Russian, German, Italian and French scholars.

A. Wessels Company, New York, have in preparation a volume of "Legends of the Iroquois," collected by William W. Canfield of Utica. The greater part of these legends were told by "Cornplanter," a noted chief of the Senecas, to one of the early pioneers of Western New York, and were preserved in diaries kept by the white man for a number of years. They came into Mr. Canfield's hands and he at once commenced a study of the folk-lore of the Iroquois through some of the oldest and best-informed men of the tribes in this state. The happy result of these investigations is given in the volume. The edition will be limited to 500 copies. They will publish shortly "Eglee, a Girl of the Period," a strong story of the French Revolution.

Richard G. Badger, (The Gorham Press,) 194 Boylston Street, Boston, has in press the following fiction: "A Bunch of Rope Yarns," by Stanton H. King, whose "Dog Watches at Sea" was hailed as a true picture of the life of a sailor of to-day; "The Lost Brigade," by Charles W. Hall; "Carita," by Louis Pendleton; "Don Luis's Wife," by Lillian Hinman Shuey; "Threads of Life," by Clara Sherwood Rollins; and "A Romance of Wolf Hollow," by Anna Wolfrom. In poetry he will bring out "The Dancers," by Edith M. Thomas; "A Reed by the River," by Virginia Woodward Cloud; "Cupid is King," by Roy Farrell Greene; "Apollo and Keats," by Clifford Lanier; "The Song at Midnight," by Mary M. Adams; "Days We Remember," by Marian Douglas; "Tangled in Stars," by Ethelwyn Wetherald; and the "Legende of Sainte Caribette des Ois," by Gertrude Hall.

The Government Printing Office has just published Volume I of the "Annals of the Astrophysical Observatory of the Smithsonian Institution," prepared by S. P. Langley, with the assistance of C. G. Abbot. The book is the result of a research originally due to a discovery, made in 1881, with the then newly-invented bolometer, in the clear air of an altitude of over 12,000 feet, of solar heat in a then unknown spectral region now called the "lower infra-red spectrum." The bolometer has since been used to explore and to map the region first observed, and the experiments have reached a surprising degree of accuracy. Dr. Langley is encouraged by the results to believe that his early hopes of making the study of the solar energy not simply an interesting scientific pursuit, but one of material usefulness, (such, for instance, as foretelling the remoter changes of weather which affect the harvests,) may one day be justified.

Edwin S. Gorham has just ready "Divorce and Remarriage," a sermon by Dr. Morgan Dix; and "A Poppy Garden," by Emily Malbone Morgan, illustrated by Frances Hayden. During October will be issued "The Master and His Method," by Griffith Jones; "Man, Men and the Master," by Bishop Henry C. Potter, forming the Bedell lectures for 1902; and the first volume of "Hierurgia Anglicana," revised and enlarged, a very important work dealing with the ceremonial of the English church. The second volume will follow next February. This work belongs to a new Library of Liturgiology and Ecclesiology in which four volumes are to be issued each year. The remaining two for the year will be "The First Prayer-Book of King Edward VI.;" and a miscellaneous volume dealing with "Ceremonial." November will bring a third edition revised and enlarged of "The Adversary," Rev. William Matson's highly-praised work on Satanology; and "The Bible Searching Almanac for 1903."

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO. are about to issue a volume by the well-known landscape architect, J. Wilkinson Elliott, called "A Plea for Hardy Plants." Mr. Elliott has for years been fighting the battle of permanence and variety, as opposed to tender and monotonous plants now too largely used for home adornment. He argues for our native asters, lilies, hollyhocks, and the hundreds of beautiful plants that make Europeans exclaim in astonishment at the richness of our flora. It is a suggestive work, valuable to the amateur gardener. Concurrently with the publication of Mrs. Burton Kingsland's "The Book of Weddings," to be brought out on the 15th inst., they will issue "The Book of Good Manners," which is a new title of her "Etiquette for All Occasions," published last spring. The last one is a complete manual on the ways and means of "getting married," and was written because so many readers of her first book asked for more particular information on this subject.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY have just ready "The American Diary of a Japanese Girl," by Miss Morning Glory, in which a modern Japanese girl gives her impressions of American life, manners and customs, illustrated, in colors and black and white, by the well-known Japanese artist, Genjiro Yeto; "The Mishaps of an Automobilist," by De Witt Clinton Falls, author of "A Golf Alphabet," in which the author shows with pencil and pen the comical accidents that often happen to the automobilist; also, the following fiction: "Wolfville Nights," by Alfred Henry Lewis, the third of the author's series of works on Wolfville life; "A Woman's Ventures," by David Graham Phillips (John Graham,) a story of a charming and handsome young American woman, who though high-minded is contemptuous of conventionalities; "Come With Me into Babylon," by Josiah M. Ward, a romantic story of the time of Nebuchadnezzar and the last days of Nineveh; "The Garden of Lies," by Justin Miles Forman, a story of love and adventure in modern Paris; also, "The Foray of the Hendrick Hudson," by Frank Mackenzie Saville, a story of adventure that is said to be as fascinating as "The Prisoner of Zenda."

A. C. MCCLURG & CO. have just ready "The Expedition of Lewis and Clark," reprinted from the edition of 1814, with introduction and index by James K. Hosmer, the author of several authoritative works on Western history. They will publish at once "Various Views," by William Morton Payne, a new book of essays on literature and education, uniform with Mr. Payne's previous works in character of contents, arrangement, and typography and binding. They have also nearly ready the seventh edition of "The Bridge of the Gods," by F. H. Balch, with full-page drawings by L. Maynard Dixon. They will also publish next month Mrs. Dye's American romance, "The Conquest," being the true story of Lewis and Clark and other border heroes. They call attention to the Helpful Thought Series, including "Helpful Thoughts," from the Meditations of Marcus Aurelius Antonius, selected by Walter Lee Brown, "Right Reading," words of good council on the choice and use of books, and "Catch Words of Cheer," helpful thoughts for each day of the year, compiled by Sara A. Hubbard. These volumes are bound in a variety of styles and are sold singly or boxed in twos and threes. The volumes are especially attractive for the holiday season.

THE NEW AMSTERDAM BOOK COMPANY have just ready in their Commonwealth Series an unabridged reprint of Alexander MacKenzie's "Voyages from Montreal Through the Continent of North America to the Frozen and Pacific Oceans in 1789 and 1793, with an Account of the Rise and State of the Fur Trade." The edition is in two volumes, with three maps and a portrait in photogravure. The original has long ago become scarce and commands a high price. They will shortly add to the same series "History of the Five Indian Nations of Canada which are dependent on the Province of New York," by Hon. Cadwallader Colden. In the Young Matrons' Library are announced a series of dainty books of which the first to appear will be "Household Hints;" "Little French Dinners;" and "Plain Needlework." Four books now form the Wittyman's Library: "Four Hundred Laughs;" "Here Lies;" "Handbook of Proverbs" and "Hasty Pudding Poems." Other books in preparation include a low-price edition of "The Mabinogion;" "The Viceroy's Protege," by Guy Boothby; "The Mahoney Million," a New York story, by Charles Townsend; "Captain Fanny," by William Clark Russell; "Beyond the Great South Wall," by Arthur Bennett; "Pictorial Scotland and Ireland," illustrated from photographs; and "Lays for Little Chaps," a book of children's poems, by Alfred J. Waterhouse.

MACMILLAN & CO. will publish at once an important and scholarly work by Brooks Adams, entitled "The New Empire," in which the author argues that "the United States must go on as she is going until she becomes the centre of the greatest empire that has ever existed or until she collapses under the strain of administering so huge a mass." In his opinion "America's chief danger is the conservatism which tends to prevent her from changing her institutions to suit changing conditions." Jacob A. Riis's new book, "The Battle of the Slum," is nearly ready, and complements the author's former volume, "How the Other Half Lives;" "The Government of New York: its history and administration," by Professor William C. Morey, gives a brief and comprehensive review of the government of the State in respect to its historical growth, its structural features and the work which it performs for the benefit of the people; and in her book "From the Old World to the New: how America was found and settled," Marguerite Stockman Dickson treats of the discovery and colonization of America. Among the fiction immediately forthcoming are B. K. Benson's "Bayard's Courier;" Mark Lee Luther's "The Henchman," disclosing the workings of political life in New York State; and "Pickett's Gap," by Homer Greene. Mabel Wright Osgood's new book for young people will be called "In Dogtown," and will treat of the family of "Waddles," first introduced in "Tommy-Anne and the Three Hearts."

LITTLE, BROWN & CO. will publish the following books October 11: "Glimpses of China and Chinese Homes," by Edward S. Morse, formerly Professor of Zoology in the Imperial University, Tokyo, and author of "Japanese Homes and Their Surroundings;" "The Spiritual Outlook," a survey of the religious life of our time as related to progress, by Willard Chamberlain Selleck; new illustrated editions of two of Miss Alcott's famous stories, "Little Women" with fifteen full-page pictures by Alice Barber Stephens and "An Old-Fashioned Girl" with twelve full-page pictures by Jessie Wilcox Smith; two new books for young people, "Adventures of Torqua," by Charles F. Holder, and "Polly's Secret," by Harriet A. Nash; a new 32-volume Barrington edition of Charles Lever's writings; also, new editions of "Prayers, Ancient and Modern," selected and arranged by Mary W. Tileston, author of "Daily Strength for Daily Needs." Although announced as an "Abridged Parkman" or a "one-volume Parkman" the book entitled "The Struggle for a Continent," recently published by Little, Brown & Co. does not in any way supersede the regular 12-volume edition of the great historian's writings. Professor Pelham Edgar of Victoria College, University of Toronto, who edited "The Struggle for a Continent," has simply supplied notes to give a continuous account, as far as possible in Parkman's own words, of the struggle for the possession of the American continent, beginning with colonization of Florida by the Huguenots in 1562, and culminating in the fall of Quebec in 1759.

D. APPLETON & CO. will publish during October "Funds and Their Uses," by Dr. F. A. Cleveland, of the University of Pennsylvania; and "Trust Finance," by Dr. E. S. Meade, of the same university, two very important books on questions of vital interest. To the Artistic Craft Series will be added "Cabinet Making and Designing," by C. Spooner, and "Silver Work and Jewelry," by H. Wilson. "Animals Before Man in North America," by Dr. F. A. Lucas; "Scandinavian Literature," by Dr. George Brandes; and "The Story of a Grain of Wheat," by William C. Edgar, are nearly ready; and "Sir William Johnson," by Augustus C. Buell, and "Sir William Pepperill," by Noah Brooks, will shortly be added to the Historic Lives. In fiction the month will bring "Castle Omeragh," by F. Frankfort Moore; "The Sins of a Saint," by J. R. Aitkin; "A Bayard from Bengal," by F. Anstey; "Tales About Temperaments," by J. Oliver Hobbes; and "The Housewives of Edenrise," an anonymous book dealing with many idiosyncrasies of women. For younger readers there will be "Behind the Line," a story of school and football, by Ralph Henry Barbour; "With the Flag in the Channel," by James Barnes, describing the adventures of Capt. Gustavus Conynham; "Miss Lochinvar," a story for girls, by Marion Ames Taggart; and "Jacks of All Trades," a story for girls and boys, by Catherine N. Birdsall. The Appletons also expect to bring out a translation of Emile Boutmy's "Elements d'une Psychologie Politique du Peuple Americain," (Elements of a political psychology of the American people.) Late this season there will be a "Life of Horace Greeley," by William A. Linn, who worked under Greeley on the editorial staff of the N. Y. Tribune.

HARPER & BROTHERS will publish on the 14th inst. W. D. Howells's long-promised book of comment and reminiscence, entitled "Literature and Life;" Matilde Serao's new novel, "The Conquest of Rome;" new editions of William Agnew Paton's "Pisturesque Sicily," and of Howells's famous story, "An International Episode," with marginal and full-page illustrations by Harry McVickar; also, "The Lovable Tales of Janey and Josey and Joe," a delightful new book for very little children, by Miss Gertrude Smith, author of the "Roggie and Reggie Stories." On October 21 they will bring out "An Old Country House," by Richard Le Gallienne; "The Reign of Queen Anne," by Justin McCarthy; "Song of Two Centuries," a new book of poems, by Will Carleton; and "Winslow Plain," by Sarah P. McLean. On that day may also be expected "A History of the American People," a monumental work in five volumes, by the president of Princeton University, Dr. Woodrow Wilson. They have made arrangements for publishing a co-operative history of the United States, edited by Professor Albert Bushnell Hart. This work will comprise twenty-six volumes, grouped under the general title of "The American Nation: a history from original material by associated scholars." Each volume will have about 300 pages, with illustrations, maps, critical bibliography and an index. The period covered will be from the discovery to the present day. The division of the work will be chronological. Among the contributors are Professors E. P. Cheyney, E. G. Bourne, C. M. Andrews, E. B. Greene, G. E. Howard, A. C. McLaughlin, F. J. Turner, William McDonald, G. P. Garrison, T. C. Smith, W. A. Dunning, and Messrs. W. J. McGee, R. G. Thwaites, W. G. Brown, J. K. Hosmer, W. C. Ford and others.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have in preparation "Bookbinders and Their Craft," by Miss S. T. Prideaux, in an edition limited to 500 numbered copies, each fully illustrated from the author's and others' designs, and with a cover design by Miss Prideaux. This is a discussion of various phases of the art of bookbinding and design by a practical worker who has wrought in her field with originality and power. The subjects include English, Scottish, French and Italian bindings, early stamped bindings, pattern making, Roger Payne, and a review of Thoinan's "Les Relieurs Français." They have also under way "Cross Country with Horse and Hound," by Frank Sherman Peer, whose special object is to give the novice an insight into the game from the point of view both of hunting and riding, with the hope that many who "hunt to ride" may be inspired to "ride to hunt." The author is a cross country rider of considerable experience, a member of a prominent New York State Hunt, and has ridden to hounds in England, France and Canada. The illustrator of the volume, J. Crawford Wood, is one of England's keenest hunting men. They also announce a work on "The American Merchant Marine: its history and romance from 1660 to 1902," by Winthrop L. Marvin, associate editor of the Boston Journal. Although history, this book has the interest of a romance, especially the chapters dealing with the East India trade and with the whaling fishery. The historical narrative is full and is enlivened with the records of many personal experiences which give it a popular interest not usually found in books on this subject. They will publish shortly "A Fighting Frigate, and Other Essays and Addresses," a volume of essays by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge; "Literary Landmarks of Oxford," by Laurence Hutton, with illustrations by Herbert Railton; "Jethro Bacon and the Weaker Sex," two new stories of old New England life, by J. F. Stimson, so widely known as "J. S. of Dale;" also, "Vive l' Empereur," a novel, by Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews, the historical side of which is a suggestion from some half-told Napoleonic legend, with six very telling illustrations by F. C. Yohn. John Kimberly Mumford's "Oriental Rugs," which has been recognized as the authority since its first appearance two years ago, will appear this fall with a new list of elaborated colored illustrations. There will be sixteen of these, from entirely new subjects.

FROM MONTREAL THROUGH THE CONTINENT OF NORTH AMERICA TO THE FROZEN AND PACIFIC OCEANS in 1789 and 1793 with an account of

The Rise and State of the Fur Trade

By ALEXANDER MACKENZIE

With Three Maps and a Portrait in Photogravure reproduced from a very rare stipple engraving. 2 volumes. Post 8vo, cloth, gilt top, $1.00 net per volume.

SIR ALEXANDER MACKENZIE'S journey to the unknown regions of the wild north and his exploration of the great Mackenzie River from its sources to the Arctic Ocean may easily rank among the greatest achievements on this continent. In view of the fact that the opening of the territory west of the Rocky Mountains followed quickly after Mackenzie's Voyages, and the great Hudson Bay Company immediately started to stud the whole northern country with small trading posts, whence have been drawn since incalculable riches in the furs of the North, the quiet, unimpassioned story of the sturdy Scotchman's victory over almost incredible privations and obstacles is invaluable as a contribution to our knowledge of early American exploration, and has therefore been included in the Commonwealth Library.

THE AMERICAN CATALOGUE of books in print and for sale July 1, 1876, compiled under the direction of F. LEYPOLDT, and its supplements, 1876–84, 1884–90, 1890–95, and 1895–1900, compiled under the editorial direction of R. R. BOWKER, aims to present all the bibliographical features of the books in the American market, arranged in the first part alphabetically by both authors and titles, and in the second part alphabetically by subjects.

The Catalogue and its supplementary volumes form the only approximately complete guide in existence to the American books of the day, so arranged as to make reference easy from whatever direction the inquiry may come, whether from that of the author, or the title, or the subject. It not only furnishes the desired information about any particular book of which the consulter is in search, but shows what others there are by the same author or on the same subject in which he is interested. To the bookseller, therefore, it is valuable both in filling orders and in stimulating business; to the librarian, in supplying gaps and proportioning his collection; and to all who are practically concerned with books, in furnishing information which nowhere else is obtainable by so convenient a method, if obtainable at all.

The author-and-title volume of the 1876 volume is out of print. A limited number of the subject volume may be had in half leather binding at $15.

The volumes covering the periods 1876–84 and 1884–90 is also out of print.

The hero personates Christ in the Oberammergau Passion Play. The heroine is a worldly woman of fashion who becomes enamoured with this man, her fancy painting him as the Heavenly Savior in reality. The denouement is startling. The temptations of the hero equal those of St. Anthony. But the woman finds redemption.

H. WOLFF, Bookbinder,

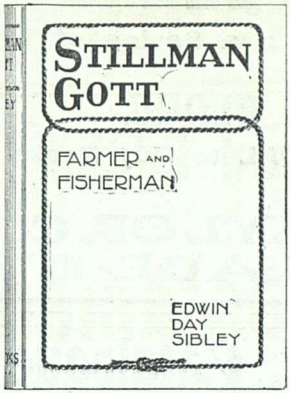
92-98 Centre Street, 143-147 Leonard Street,

N. Y. CITY.



IT'S A CLEAN STORY; one that makes you feel better after you have read it. There's many a laugh in its pages and ofttimes a cry. The reading public and the literary critics have given it a hearty reception.

THE Louisville Courier-Journal, in a review of the book, said:

"Stillman Gott is a rural philosopher, just as his prototypes were, full of dry, droll sayings, witty stories, and quaint expressions. Generous to a fault, lovable and kind beyond words, he is one of those characters we cannot have too much of, either in fiction or in real life. It is a pleasure to know Stillman Gott, and the reader will welcome him into American fiction to take his place along with David Harum and Eben Holden."

IT'S A MIGHTY FINE BOOK in many ways: good story, beautifully printed on the best of paper, and superbly bound in a durable and attractive manner. You can get it at any book store.

CIRCULARS?

In estimating the value of a circular letter for advertising purposes the vital question is not "How much do they cost per thousand?"—but—"How many orders or inquiries will be obtained per dollar of total outlay including postage?"

Which way do you figure?

We can duplicate typewriting so closely that your customer will be sure that the letter was personally addressed to him.

Of course he will answer it.

The Lady Poverty

A XIIIth Century Allegory

Translated and Edited by

MONTGOMERY CARMICHAEL

"THE LADY POVERTY" is a mediæval romance, simple in form and charming in conception, telling how St. Francis wooed and won that most difficult of all Brides—my Lady Poverty. Apart from its beauty it is noteworthy as the first book written concerning St. Francis of Assisi, having been completed within a year after the Saint's death (A.D. 1227). The little volume here offered is the first English translation, and faithfully enshrines the spirit of the original.

The volume opens with a bibliographical introduction by the translator, and closes with an extract from the XIth canto of Dante's "Paradise" relating to the Allegory.

Printed in plain type, rubricated, with a photogravure frontispiece, and daintily bound in Franciscan brown. 12mo, 209 pp. Price, net, $1.75.

A Daughter of the Snows

A strong and extremely dramatic story. Its plot is unique, its characters boldly drawn, and the love interest intense. The first full length novel from a writer whose tales "The Son of the Wolf," and "The God of His Fathers," etc., have won him much popularity as well as recognition from the first critics. The book is beautifully illustrated in colors from drawings by F. C. Yohn, and is handsomely bound.
